Holy Joe's Café

The UCC Coffee Project Steps It Up

Over the last few months we have learned that supporting Fair Trade products helps to make a positive difference in not only in the lives of small farmers across the world but in all of our lives.

Now the First Congregational UCC of Wallington, Connecticut and the UCC Coffee Project are offering us the opportunity to make a positive difference in the lives of our military personnel serving in Iraq and Afghanistan through a ministry named Holy Joe's Café.

We will be joining First Congregational UCC and others by purchasing coffee and coffee supplies to be sent directly to Military Chaplains in these areas. The Chaplains are setting up "cafes" and offering free coffee to the troops.

These "cafes" provide a nonthreatening way to expose the Good News to some who may otherwise never enter the chapel and they provide a safe social environment that does not revolve around alcohol. The "cafes" also let the troops know that the folks back home care.

Military Chaplain Colt Randles writes:

"We are gaining a following of coffee drinkers. In the chapel our religious support literature sits right next to the pot on a series of newly built shelves. They come for coffee but they can't escape Jesus' invitation to come to the table and dine. Please pray for the Spirit of God to cause an inquiring heart in the many who are now only loosely associated with the chapel. Pray for boldness on my part to rescue the perishing with the ever ready Gos- pel. We will be good on coffee for quite some time now and with the other shipment that you said was on the way. You have been a great blessing to our soldiers at all levels."

*In Him,
Ch Colt Randles*

The Fair Trade Coffee order form in today's bulletin contains a line for donations to Holy Joe's Café. It is located under the category entitled "Other Opportunities to Be Generous".

Whether or not we agree with US policy in regard to Iraq, let's let the troops know that we care and support this ministry.
